Phonology (16)---- phonetics in order to see how sounds or signs (17)---- in a system in each language. In phonology, it matters (18)---- sounds are contrastive or not. For example, in English, [r] and [l] are two different sounds - and the words "road" and "load" differ according to which of these sounds is used. But in some languages, [r] and [l] are variations of the same sound. Speakers of such languages (19)---- never make a meaning difference in words that differ by only that sound. Phonologists study not only contrastive consonants and vowels in a language, but also the way pronunciation is affected by the position of the sound in the word and the sounds that are nearby. They are also interested (20)---- syllables, phrases, rhythm, tone, and intonation.

Walter Tull was born on 28th April 1888 to a slave Barbadian father and a British mother. Although he was of mixed race, he was always considered to be black. He began playing football at Clapton and at the age of 21, he was transferred to Tottenham. When he made his debut against Sunderland, he became the third black football player to show up in the English Football League after Arthur Wharton and Billy Clarke. Everything was like a dream for the Tully, who was leaving many people with a strong impression owing to his great form. However, this dream would soon turn into a nightmare. In September 1909, he was exposed to racist abuse during the away game against Bristol City and for the first time, a racist incident on a football field was reported as news. In the news report in Football Star Magazine, Bristol fans were called “hooligans,” which was not a common word at the time. After the disgusting assault, Tull went all shy and his teammates turned their backs on him. He left Tottenham and continued to play for Northampton Town until World War I broke out. Tull signed up for the battalion consisting of football players. His leadership skills were soon noticed by his superiors. Consequently, they sent him to the military academy in Scotland although, at the time, blacks were not allowed to be military officers. Eventually, he became the first ever black officer in the English army. Tull was killed in the battle in Pas-de-Calais, but his body was never found.

29. It is understood from the passage that Tull ----.

- A) had never become a victim of racism before the match against Bristol
- B) received a lot of support from his teammates after he was abused racially by hooligans
- C) played together with two other black footballers, Arthur Wharton and Billy Clarke
- D) had a dream to play for Tottenham, but it never came true because of his race
- E) was the protagonist of the first ever news story about a racist event on a football pitch

30. According to the passage, Tull was able to become a military officer ----.

- A) for he had an influential character
- B) as he always dreamed to be a lieutenant
- C) despite the lack of support from his superiors
- D) after he successfully led his battalion to victory
- E) because he was a well-known football player

31. What is the author's primary purpose in this passage?

- A) To inform when and where the word "hooligan" was first used.
- B) To give examples of racist violence that took place in the 20th century.
- C) To give an account of William Tull's struggles and achievements in his life.
- D) To present the ways to cope with racism and other types of discrimination.
- E) To criticise the behaviour of Tull's teammates and his superiors in the army.

Electric cars have reformed the electric vehicle industry. These cars are environmentally safe and they have the potential to give a superior performance to users. They have a powerful battery, which is charged with electricity. This battery is somewhat similar to the batteries that can be found in your laptops and smartphones. Namely, lithium ion battery is used for electric cars in order to power them up. In order to move the car, electric motors convert electrical energy drawn from the batteries to mechanical power. This way is more efficient than the technology that is used in combustion engines found on traditional cars. As a result of this, if one drives an electric car, they will be able to cover a longer distance with their charge and this means saving money in the long term.

32. How does having an electric car affect the users' budget?

- A) As the motor used in those cars is tiny, it doesn't cost much.
- B) Electric cars consume less petrol than others.
- C) It helps users to feel more comfortable while driving.
- D) In the long run, it helps to save money.
- E) Electric cars aren't expensive compared to the others.

33. It's understood from the passage that the battery used in electric cars ----.

- A) supplies less energy for the engine compared to other sources
- B) doesn't need to be recharged to power up the cars
- C) is also found on all cutting edge technology cars
- D) has gained great importance in engineering
- E) is not extremely different from the ones used in some other devices

34. What is the author's primary purpose in this passage?

- A) To give information about a new technology vehicle and its components.
- B) To explain how to use electric cars safely and save energy.
- C) To inform the readers about all new technology cars.
- D) To criticise the components of electric cars and their design.
- E) To help the readers decide on which vehicles to choose in the future.

Medical tests like imaging internal organs often require operating patients or making them swallow big tubes with cameras on them. But what if we get the same results with less expensive, invasive and time-consuming methods? Scientists from MIT's Computer Science and Artificial Intelligence Laboratory (CSAIL) led by Professor Dina Katabi are working on a device called ReMix, a system which is described as "in-body GPS." Practically, the patient swallows an implant and ReMix connects this implant wirelessly. If there is a tumour in a tissue or an organ, the implant homes in it and ReMix detects its location with the help of wireless signals. To test the device, Katabi's group first implanted a small marker in animal tissues. To track its movement, they used a wireless device that reflects radio signals off the patient. It was based on a wireless technology that the researchers previously demonstrated to detect heart rate, breathing, and movement. A special algorithm then uses that signal to pinpoint the exact location of the marker. In animal tests, they succeeded in tracking the implants with centimeter level accuracy. Now, they think that such implants can be used to deliver drugs to specific regions in the body in the future.

- 35. What makes ReMix superior to the other methods used for medical testing?
 - A) It makes use of a simple program to detect the markers inside the body.
 - B) It will be cheaper, less invasive and time-consuming when compared to other ways of viewing internal organs.
 - C) It will be applicable for all patients in the near future.
 - D) It is believed that the use of such devices on animals will be beneficial.
 - E) It is being developed by a team working for MIT, which is by far the best institute in the world.

36. ReMix, a system which is described as “in-body GPS”, ----.

- A) can only connect implants with a very special and expensive program developed by Dina Katabi and her team
- B) utilises wireless technology to locate ingestible implants inside the human body
- C) is one of the expensive, invasive and time-consuming methods used for medical testing
- D) is the best device to detect the locations of tumours inside the body
- E) is not practically used in animals for checking the efficiency of it

37. Which of the following is the main idea of this passage?

- A) Every patient should be encouraged to try new treatments used for cancer therapy.
- B) Using technological devices in medicine is not available now, but it is supposed to be in the market very soon.
- C) The level of accuracy recorded in animal tests is not high enough to see the technology in practise in the near future.
- D) It will be possible to use high-tech devices to pinpoint the location of tumours with the help of indigestible implants in the future.
- E) The location of tumours will continue to be detected only by medical tests such as surgical or other invasive procedures.

China is famous for its pandas, and infamous for its pollution. To celebrate the country's national animal while also combating greenhouse gas emissions, a solar power plant investor and operator has unveiled a brand-new panda shaped plant in Datong, China. The solar-panel bear is enormous, but it's only the first stage of construction for the new Panda Power Plant. The plant currently has a capacity of 50 megawatts. In the near future, it is planned to construct a second solar panda. When fully connected, the Panda Power Plant will measure 1500 acres and have a capacity of 100 megawatts. In the next 25 years, the Panda Power Plant will produce 3.2 billion kilowatt hours of solar energy, thus reducing China's dependence on coal and carbon emissions by 2.74 million tons. As for the pandas themselves, their black and white features are rendered using two types of solar panels: white thin film photovoltaic (PV) cells and black monocrystalline silicon PV cells. The amusing designs are intended to promote awareness about clean energy among young people. Chinese youth will also be recruited to attend summer camps at the Panda Power Plant to learn more about green energy production. Panda Green Energy also plans to construct panda-themed power stations in Fiji and the Philippines, with the goal of constructing 100 panda plants around the world over the next five years.

38. The solar plants are designed to look like a panda because ----.

- A) the project also aims to raise consciousness about green energy among young people
- B) the black and white cells are more efficient compared to the other cells used in solar panels
- C) China wants to promote their national animal and raise more funds for conservation projects
- D) China already has pollution problems caused by the massive use of fossil fuels, especially coal
- E) Fiji and the Philippines have already built about a hundred panda-themed power stations

39. According to the passage, once two panda shaped solar plants are combined ----.

- A) it will be possible to produce twice as much energy as the current production
- B) China will cease the use of fossil fuels such as coal and oil
- C) thousands of similar power stations will be built all around the world
- D) the first stage of the construction will have successfully been completed
- E) they will instantly start producing 3.2 billion kilowatt hours of solar energy

40. The underlined word "infamous" in the passage has the same meaning with ----.

- A) celebrated
- B) obvious
- C) inspirational
- D) notorious
- E) deficient

41-43. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Overtaking on single carriageway roads is one of the most dangerous manoeuvres drivers can perform, and is usually unnecessary. Overtaking is dangerous because it is impossible to accurately judge the speed and distance of approaching traffic. This lack of judgement can easily be fatal when travelling at speed on the wrong side of the road. If two vehicles headed towards each other are both travelling at 60mph, the gap between decreases by about 60 metres every second. It is, therefore, incredibly dangerous to overtake on rural roads, where there will rarely be enough straight, visible road ahead to be certain that nothing is coming in the opposite direction. It is also simply not worth it: if you are travelling at 55mph, and you overtake someone doing 50mph, and you have ten miles left of your journey, you'll only arrive one minute faster than if you'd stayed behind the slower vehicle. However, in reality you wouldn't even save this much time, as you would still need to slow down for bends, junctions, etc. Authorities advise that overtaking should be avoided unless absolutely essential, for instance to overtake an extremely slow moving vehicle on a long, open stretch, without speeding or traffic coming the other way. Otherwise just hang back, relax and enjoy the journey.

41. What is the danger regarding overtaking on rural roads?

- A) Drivers on rural roads are not aware of the possible threats while they are driving at 60mph or more.
- B) The visibility of rural roads is usually not enough to see if another vehicle is coming in the opposite direction.
- C) Compared to urban roads, the maintenance of rural roads is performed less frequently.
- D) The traffic on rural roads is too dense, which makes it highly dangerous to overtake other vehicles.
- E) If the gap between two vehicles on opposite lanes is less than 60 metres, a fatal accident cannot be avoided.

42. According to the paragraph, ----.

- A) the speed limits on rural roads must be less than 50mph in order to prevent accidents resulting in death
- B) even if you avoid unnecessary overtaking, accidents might happen due to speeding on rural roads
- C) it might not be possible to arrive at your destination earlier as there are other factors which will slow you down
- D) overtaking a very slow vehicle is safe whether or not you have a good vision of the traffic in the opposite direction
- E) the only dangerous manoeuvre a driver can perform on a rural road is to overtake another vehicle

43. The authorities argue that ----.

- A) it is worth overtaking when you still have a long way to go as you can save some time and arrive at your destination earlier
- B) the elements of roads such as bends and junctions might cause traffic accidents unless the drivers are well aware of them
- C) better roads with better visibility should be constructed so that the mortality rate of rural road accidents can be minimised
- D) if it is not definitely necessary, drivers should refrain from overtaking and take pleasure from relaxed driving
- E) whatever your speed, the gap between two vehicles on opposite directions closes so quickly that it is impossible to avoid crashes

44-48. sorularda karşılıklı konuşmanın boş bırakılan kısmını tamamlayabilecek ifadeyi bulunuz.

44. Ashley : I thought you were going to buy a new flat in this neighbourhood.

Brian : Well, I was going to buy one, but the prices are just too high.

Ashley : ----

Brian : I will probably just stay in my current apartment for the time being and wait for the real estate prices to go down.

- A) Isn't it too hard for you to live alone in your apartment?
- B) What is the exact reason for buying a new flat?
- C) So, what are you going to do now?
- D) You know the economy is getting better these days.
- E) Is it a good idea to buy a flat at a low cost?

45. Lena : What do you think we should have for dinner tonight?

Lisa : ----

Lena : I know that, but you're putting on a little weight, aren't you?

Lisa : You might be right. I guess I should go on a diet as soon as possible.

- A) How about making a healthy salad with fresh vegetables and some olive oil?
- B) Shall we eat grilled fish at the restaurant that opened last week?
- C) I think we should definitely try something new.
- D) Well, you know me. I can always eat pizza or spaghetti.
- E) I hope we can finish our meal in time and be at the office before the meeting starts.

46. Nancy : I suppose chronic diseases are on the rise because of an ageing population.

Martin : That is not so simple. More than half of the patients catch them at early ages.

Nancy : ---

Martin : No, it's not. Urbanisation also plays quite an important role.

- A) Are there any preventive health solutions to the condition?
- B) Really? So it's not simply a condition of longer life.
- C) I hope the specialists will soon find new ways of treating it.
- D) I am sure that efficient healthcare systems will be useful.
- E) Can early diagnosis of the disease help younger patients?

47. Burak : The report says, a company is launching some satellites in a project aimed at delivering affordable Internet access to every corner of the globe.

Derya : ---

Burak : Well, China, Russia and North Korea have already voiced concerns that the network could damage their national security.

Derya : As a matter of fact, they might be right as such a network could be used to gather intelligence.

- A) Connecting millions of people who are currently not connected will greatly transform their lives; however, I don't think everyone will be happy at the prospect of a global network.
- B) I've read that too. It seems they have already launched six satellites and they intend to send some 600 more until the end of the year.
- C) They're going to start by focusing on connecting schools, connecting boats, connecting planes, and connecting huge territories of the planet.
- D) However, the project may be shut down before it can even begin since the threat of space junk is growing. So, only time will tell whether we see this project lift off.
- E) The Russian government has been tightening its grip over the internet since social media facilitated huge protests against the government in 2011-2013.

48. Kevin : If you are a Star Wars fan, there is good news for you as the ninth film called "The Rise of Skywalker" will be made soon. The film will be starring Mark Hamill as Luke Skywalker and the late Carrie Fisher as Princess Leia.

Richard : ---

Kevin : She did; however, the producers were able to use previously unseen footage from the film "The Force Awakens".

Richard : I see. Well, that's great news. Besides Star Wars films, I am also a huge fan of Carrie Fisher and I can't miss the opportunity to watch her final acting performance.

- A) How is that possible? As you said, Fisher died a few years ago.
- B) Fisher acted in four Star Wars films as Princess Leia.
- C) Her health began to deteriorate quite seriously.
- D) Fisher performed really well in the 7th episode.
- E) She also wrote a book and the screenplay for the film based on it.
